

Another location I have seen is Sanpete County, which includes several cities, beginning with Fairview on the north end and Manti to the south. This whole valley will be considered a place of refuge. The members who are already there will stay and assist those who come from the Wasatch Front and other areas. The homes within the cities will serve as shelters for women and children, and thousands of tents will be placed for everyone else to live in. Many of the basic utilities and infrastructure will still function in many of the smaller towns. The Saints will find ways to generate their own power and maintain running water. I know that there will still be ways to communicate with the other camps and learn about what is happening in the world. In that regard, I recently bought a commercial grade Wi-Fi router, and I was told to keep the box because I would be taking it with me. It will be used by someone else for a wise purpose. Once the troubles start, people will not be able to go to a regular temple. There will be portable temples, though, similar to the Tabernacle that was set up in Moses' time.

The greater San Pete valley in Utah is going to have a particularly bad attack of this virus before the Call Out. This valley must be cleansed. There is going to be a Bio-Attack on the soldiers fighting in Iraq soon. This is a given, not where, but when is the question. This Black Flu is NOT the horrible plagues that are yet to come following the "Call-Out," but just a pre-cursor of what will follow after the separation of the wheat from the tares. Perhaps this will serve as one last wake-up call, but it may come too late for people to take additional actions to prepare for future events. Prepare

When I read Sarah's book a few years ago--which I found at the public library--I felt that "knowing" again when she talked about San Pete Valley being such a place of refuge. When I read one of Roger's books--again from the library--and looked up his website, I was astounded to find a blurb on Sarah right there on his front page. These books were the kernels of truth that built a fire under me to get my year's supply of food and clothing.

As I mentioned earlier, the earthquakes had closed off many of the major canyons with rockslides. The roads were buried or severely damaged, helping protect the Places of Refuge from the foreign troops and other marauders. I was shown that after the roads and canyons were closed off through earthquakes, the Saints in the more spiritually refined camps received instructions to gather into larger groups in preparation for their next assignments. I specifically saw Cache Valley (Logan) and Sanpete County (Manti) as places where these larger groups congregated, but I was aware of several others. This was a challenging undertaking for the Saints compared to the first round of gathering, when a lot of people arrived at the camps in vehicles or buses. This time it was done on foot along mountainous backroads and trails to avoid facing troublemakers from the valleys.

Then I saw a great tumult commence all over the United States, which ended in a great deal of blood being shed. And a great many of the people who had heard our Elders preach, and had believed what they heard, but had not had the courage to embrace the Gospel when they heard it, gathered what little effects they could take with them, and came to the people in the Rocky Mountains. Then I saw many thousands of women and children take refuge in the timber, hazel rough, or any place they could conceal themselves from the turmoil that was going on in the States. And when word reached this people of their situation, there were hundreds of Seventies called upon to go and hunt them up and bring them to this people in Utah.

Then the Government of the United States patched up their difficulties, and elected a new Congress, which assembled to do business. The crusade continued against the Latter-day Saints. Our enemies attributed all their troubles to the Saints, and the crusaders raised such a howl and sent forth their petitions to Congress, that the first business they did was to order one-hundred-thousand of the best and most able-bodied men that could be obtained to come against us.

When this became known to the Saints, instructions were sent forth for all the inhabitants of this territory to gather into the valleys, as near as possible to the Temples. And the people gathered into Salt Lake, Cache, Utah and Sanpete Valleys, and to Saint George until there was a family to nearly every acre of land, and all the country around was filled with our people. And water broke forth, where before there had been no water, so that all the land could be cultivated.
