

The Day of the Call Out

- ✓ Hold family prayer.
- ✓ Who is going to stay in your home? If not, mail out letters to utility companies and mortgage companies. Make instruction lists for new occupants.
- ✓ Bury extra keys of home, cars, RV, etc. in a can on your property. If there is an EQ you will not be able to get back into your home. If you need to have someone go back into your home you can tell them where the keys are. If you see troops in your home, you can sneak off in your vehicle, etc.
- ✓ Write letters to children, family, neighbors, etc., that you will be gone indefinitely and that they can enter your property if necessary (flooding, fire, etc.). Do not mention CO, when or where or anything that will put the group at risk. Mail the letters to take a day or two for them to be delivered. Leave final instructions for food left, passcodes, keys, etc.
- ✓ Have a packing list with which vehicle(s), trailers, storage spaces, etc. that are being packed, who is driving, who is assisting, etc. Have extra straps, rope and bungees on that day. Even give the children a list to keep them busy. A list will keep you from repeating yourself and to have as a check off when people bring you items.
- ✓ Have extra bins and boxes. Tape on the top of each bin the items you will pack last minute but are still using now. Go room to room now and locate items you want to take!
- ✓ Where departure clothes that you can get dirty. Wear an apron with pockets to hold: sharpies, tape, scissors, box cutter, etc. as you are packing and labeling. It will be easier to wash an apron than loads of clothes.
- ✓ What are you doing with pets? Can food is much better for storage than dry food. (Dry goes rancid.)

- ✓ Have an EQ bucket on your back porch with EQ items: shoes, hoodie, gloves, headlamp (take these items to camp for the first day)
- ✓ Don't forget your temple names/print lists – no internet/scriptures and songbooks.
- ✓ Have a “last minute store list” and pick up those things days before the CO. The CO will not surprise you.
